Minutes:

Summary for registration: Executive Vice-President Dombrovskis underlined the importance of keeping credit flowing to the real economy, to make sure enough liquidity is in place for those who need it. He presented how the banking package that the European Commission presented in April helps to clarify the regulatory treatment of measures that financial institutions and national public authorities across the EU have put in place to provide that liquidity. Yet it is important to find ways to solve the very real problems faced by companies and households. Therefore, the purpose of the dialogue is to understand better how all these different measures have worked on the ground, and what can be improved to help companies of whatever size, and their workers to get through this crisis.
