Dear Valère et Fabrice!

How are you? Long time no see.

I would like to make you aware that [REDACTED] Leonardo, will write to Commissioner Breton an invitation letter to attend, as a speaker, a very interesting event which we are going to organize (finally!) in presence at the Bibliothèque Solvay, on the 10th of November at 18:30: we will speak of space and in particular of the role of space in relation to sustainability, competitiveness and growth.

At my much more modest level let me already extend this invitation to both of you.

We all know that the European Green Deal has set the EU on an ambitious path towards environmental sustainability and decarbonisation, aiming to make the continent climate-neutral by 2050.

Innovative space technologies are destined to play an increasingly crucial role in this transition while at the same time spurring economic growth and competitiveness.

It is exactly to explore the potential of this extraordinary sector that [REDACTED] Leonardo) and [REDACTED] Telespazio) would like to welcome Commissioner Breton and you to the event "Space to the Future: Sustainability. Competitiveness. Growth", which will take place on the 10th November (6.30 pm) at the "Bibliothèque Solvay" on the occasion of Telespazio's 60th Anniversary.

This evening of science and culture will allow our guests to discuss how space can be more and more one of the most precious jewels in the crown of the European technology excellence.

I therefore hope you will honour us with your presence and join us to celebrate the past, present and future of this sector, a key enabler for a greener, more competitive and more prosperous Union.

Kindly let me know if I will have the pleasure to welcome you on this occasion.

Best regards,
