With the likelihood of global recession increasing as inflationary pressure rises, leaders are coping with constrained fiscal, monetary and political spaces all while a widening geopolitical fracture makes a coordinated global economic response appear more difficult.

Within this challenging context, what can a new growth agenda look like?

Reporting press: not allowed.

Only invited participants will be allowed entry, no accompanying staff will be allowed.

The session will be strictly off-the-record.

Because of the purpose-driven nature of this dialogue, participants are asked to arrive on time.

Chair

- [Name]

Introduced by

- [Name]

Participants

The session will be among the highest-level sessions at the Annual Meeting, with approximately 40 ministers, business leaders, experts, and members of international organizations and civil society in the room.

Session Flow

The session will be conducted as an interactive discussion among the approximately 40 high-level participants in the room.

[Name] will open the session by introducing the chair.

She will then open the floor for 2-to-3-minute interventions.

She will weave together the different views and insights to lead an engaging dialogue that aims to drive impact and shape global, regional and industry agendas.

The chair will conclude the session by offering or asking a participant to offer key takeaways from the conversation.

Room layout: The room will be arranged as a fishbowl, with the moderator seated at one of the ends.