Dear Commissioner Breton,

Thank you for the opportunity to meet during my recent visit to Brussels. I appreciate our ongoing dialogue on a number of important issues, including the implications of Artificial Intelligence (AI) for society, its potential, and the need for responsible development and regulation of AI.

Google has long supported international cooperation among government, industry experts, academia, and civil society to create robust, pro-innovation frameworks for building and deploying technology responsibly. We are committed to working with the EU and others to create such a framework for AI.

As mentioned, we are also committed to implementing the DSA and DMA responsibly, and we appreciate the constructive and regular technical exchanges with your teams.

Lastly, I wanted to share that this week, we launched a €10M Google.org Social Innovation Fund to help social entrepreneurs use AI to solve societal issues through funding, partnerships, and training. More information is available here.

Thank you again for our dialogue on these issues. Please do not hesitate to reach out if we can be of further assistance, and I look forward to remaining in touch.

Sincerely,
