Best regards,

Hi

I hope you are doing well.
I confirm you can translate the Study in Japanese and, more generally, that the Study does not contain copyrighted material. It is nice knowing that the Study will be made known in Japan as well. Would it be possible to have reference/copy of the translated material?

Have a nice day,

Subject: question - study on trade secrets - translation into Japanese?

Dear Francesca,

I guess that I already told you that the study on trade secrets you prepared has been published.

I am contacting you because a Japanese public agency has seen the study and wants to translate it (I suppose without annexes…) into Japanese, for the benefit of the business community in Japan. Apparently, they already did the same with the Hogan Lovell’s study. This agency is asking for our authorisation.

We have the intention to allow them to translate the text (my understanding is that the Commission is the copyright holder), but before doing so, I wanted to ask you if you have any inconvenience about this. I guess not… Also, I wanted to double check with you if there is any third-party protected material within the text. I guess that there is none. My reading is that references to others’ works (e.g. in the literature review) are done under the right to citation etc. But, could you please confirm this?

Thanks for your reply.

Best regards,

Hi Lorenzo,
Here is the link to Tajani's team with the respective contacts;
It is perfectly ok for you to contact them directly and most probably they would be interested.
I can try to see who in the team would be best placed for you to contact – but I have to leave now and I will be back on Tuesday.
I can back to you next week.
Regards

http://ec.europa.eu/commission_2010-2014/tajani/about/team/index_en.htm

I will be away for some days (be back on Tuesday).

Dear
All is well here, hope the same with you. Thank you for the great news! Regarding Mr. Tajani, is it appropriate for you to put us in contact with him and/or his staff? We were thinking on organizing dissemination event/activities to raise awareness. Of course we count on D3 first, but coordinating with Mr. Tajani may be a plus for visibility in Italy.
Talk to you soon.

Kindest regards,

Francesca / Lorenzo
Dear Francesca, dear Lorenzo

I hope all is well with you.

This is to let you know that the Commission will adopt this Thursday a proposal for a Directive on trade secrets. The proposal will still have to be negotiated with and adopted by the EU Parliament and the Council. The proposal comes from here D3 as you know - but the Commissioner for Industry and Enterprise, Mr Tajani, on the last minute asked if it could be associated with it; meaning that the proposal will be presented as being an initiative both from Barnier and Tajani. This I suppose may give some visibility to the project in Italy.

Kind regards

Subject: Trade secrets - translation of your study into Japanese

Dear Francesca, dear Prof. Franzoni

I hope you are well.

Francesca may remember that earlier this year I contacted her about the translation of your study into Japanese. A Japanese public entity (JETRO) asked our European Publication Office for a licence to do so. We granted the licence.

We have just been informed that the translation into Japanese of the study has been published. It is a translation of the main points and the appendices have been omitted.

Here are the links:

To the document:

and to the JETRO patent information news website:
http://www.jetro.go.jp/world/europe/ip/

I hope you may find this translation of interest.

I also take this opportunity to recall you that tomorrow the Commission should formally adopt a legislative proposal on trade secrets misappropriation. The proposal will be made available in our website in the course of the day, I hope.

I think that my colleague had already advanced this information to Francesca.

Best regards,
