Dear Jenny,

Thank you for your kind email. I will check where things stand on this (it is not something I've been directly involved in) and will get back to you shortly.

Best wishes,

Subject: Goldman Sachs European Macro Conference - 2 June 2014

Dear [REDACTED],

I hope that you are well.

I wanted to get in touch with you regarding an invitation to President Barroso to speak at Goldman Sachs' third annual European Macro Conference on Monday, 2 June 2014 at the Hilton Park Lane, London.

The invitation was extended to the President by my colleague [REDACTED] [REDACTED] several weeks ago via Ambassador Vale de Almeida.

I am not sure if it is yourself or another colleague with whom I could speak with regarding the invitation and whether the President would be interested and available to speak at our conference?

By way of background, this conference brings together over 700 of our most important clients, including senior leaders of prominent pension funds, insurance companies, banks, asset managers, and corporates from across Europe and around the world.

We hold Macro Conferences across Europe, Asia, and the Americas and speakers in recent years have included President George W. Bush, former President of France, Nicolas Sarkozy, former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, former Governor of the Bank of England Lord Mervyn King, former President of the European Central Bank Jean-Claude Trichet and U.S. Secretary of Defence Robert Gates.

Many thanks in advance for any assistance you are able to provide in this matter.

Best regards,
Jenny Cosco
