- As Parties to the 2005 UNESCO Conventions on the protection and promotion of the diversity of cultural expressions, the European Union and the People's Republic of China share a common framework of principles which shall guide their further cooperation in the field of culture.

- Promoting intercultural dialogue and mutual understanding between the EU and China is a long-term objective which shall be pursued in privileging actions which can have a structural impact on key areas of mutual interest. In this long term perspective, a particular attention should be devoted to the interests, needs and expectations of the young generations as well as to the most recent evolutions affecting the cultural sector, including the development of on-line media;

- The European Commission and the Ministry of Culture of the People's Republic of China stress their particular interest for strengthening cooperation in the fields of cultural industries, heritage and contemporary art.

- Creating a mutually conducive environment for increased cooperation and exchanges between the EU and China in the field of culture will require a deepening of the dialogue between respective authorities. Attention shall be more systematically paid to the involvement of regional and local stakeholders as regions and cities constitute major actors for the development of cultural and creative sectors. Other relevant public agencies will be associated as appropriate to ensure a wide coverage of cultural sectors and associated policy issues. The European Commission and the Ministry of Culture of the People's Republic of China will mobilise existing instruments to support the strengthening of policy dialogues and exchanges of experience between the EU and China. Attention will also be devoted to transversal policy issues affecting cultural cooperation and exchanges.

- Better access to knowledge on respective institutional settings, cultural actors and organisations as well as respective policies and tools has to be promoted. In order to facilitate cultural cooperation, the European Commission and the Ministry of Culture of the People's Republic of China will explore how to encourage information gathering, sharing and dissemination between China and the EU at all levels, including in promoting mapping exercises and studies, information and communication tools as well as networking of relevant actors.

- Increasing cooperation and exchanges will also require the promotion of new opportunities for direct cooperation and joint projects between all levels of cultural institutions, organisations and actors. The European Commission and the Ministry of Culture of the People's Republic of China will explore the possibilities to mobilise resources to support such direct cooperation.

- The orientations and priorities described above will be implemented jointly by the European Commission's Directorate General for Education, Culture, Multilingualism and Youth and the Ministry of Culture of the People's Republic of China, under the auspices of the EU-China High Level People to People dialogue.
