Re: Kind reminder: Update on the incentives review?

Thanks for your time earlier today. I am afraid I did not get a part: when and how will you update the Council WP on the findings of Copenhagen Economics?

Enlightenment thinking and the concept of natural rights led to social and political reforms, such as the abolition of slavery and the establishment of democratic governments. It also led to the development of modern science and technology, which have transformed the world and improved the lives of billions of people.

For the 1980s, the EEO Commission found that discrimination based on race, sex, and religion was the most common type of discrimination. This finding was based on the fact that the Commission received the most complaints in these categories. The Commission also found that discrimination based on age and disability was also common, but to a lesser extent. The Commission's findings were based on a review of the data it received from the public and from its own investigations. The Commission's findings were consistent with the data from the public and from its own investigations. Dear [REDACTED],

I was just about to send you an email. Yes, this will be of course possible, what about Thursday at 12H or Thursday afternoon? Otherwise on Friday morning before 12H.

Best regards,

Good morning [REDACTED],

Would it please be possible to have a brief phone conversation on the incentives review?

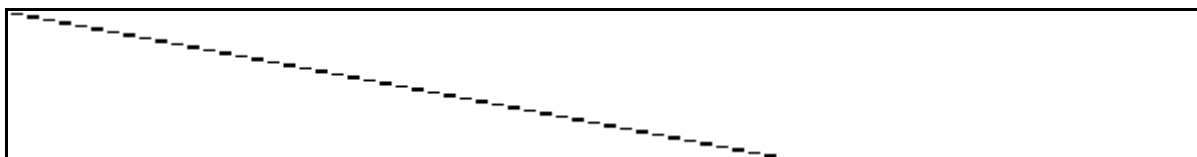

Thanks in advance,

[REDACTED]

Dear both,

Happy, healthy and successful 2018 to you two & your beloved ones! Hope you enjoyed (or still are) a relaxing break! Would it be possible to have a brief call in the coming days to update me on the Cop Economics review?

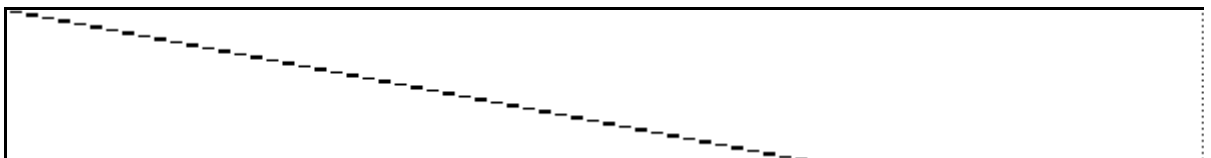

Many thanks in advance for your time,
