Ciao [REDACTED]

Thank you for the ideas. We may try, but it is not going to be easy to have specific attack rates for the different variants. Index cases were not identified (most travelers were supposed to have negative test at arrival), possibilities for exposure were multiple and to multiple potential index cases during their stay in Mallorca and the teenagers are not very collaborative. We may try to find out SAR for secondary cases once at home for those whose samples were sequenced. I will inform you if we can do such study.

Have a very nice week end

Fernando

Hola Fernando,

[REDACTED] here. How are you?

I just read your EWRS message, thanks for sharing this detailed information.

The way this outbreak occurred offers a few opportunities for understanding the transmissibility of Alfa and Delta by setting and in households. I was wondering if you are planning (and have resources) to collect these data to calculate SAR for Alfa and Delta cases in households and perhaps also in settings such as buses, accommodation, gatherings, etc. Maybe a good project for a Spanish EPIET or a Spanish speaker EPIET. What do you think?

Thank you and keep up the fight!

Best,

[REDACTED]
