Dear [REDACTED]

Many thanks for your email. The Director General will be delighted to meet [REDACTED]. However, his agenda is really tight at the moment and we can only propose slots for the end of this month/ after the Easter break, see some options hereunder:

- 25 March at 3pm
- 13 April at 3pm
- 15 April at 4pm

Let me know if any of these works.

Many thanks.

Best regards,

Dear Mr. Petriccione,

I'm writing you in follow up of today's very interesting debate organized by the Ambrosetti Institute.

Your candor and openness were much appreciated indeed and I have included below the Economist article to which I did refer.

I also take this opportunity to kindly request an informal virtual meeting with our

We would appreciate sharing our views and plans how ExxonMobil intends to play its role in meeting society's needs for energy in a reliable and sustainable manner. My company aims for industry leading GHG performance with emission reduction plans for 2025 which are projected to be consistent with the goals of the Paris Agreement. I herewith refer to our recent announcement to set up our new business venture ExxonMobil Low Carbon Solutions to commercialize Emission-Reduction Technologies with an initial focus on CCS, including projects in Europe.

We would be honored to share thoughts on how we further can collaborate and support you in achieving Europe's climate ambitions, especially in those areas such as CCS, Hydrogen, Natural Gas and decarbonisation of transport.

I appreciate your consideration and look forward to hearing from you

Kind regards,
