Dear Mr Italianer,

The Polish people have voted in favour of the political change: former prime minister Jaroslaw Kaczyński's party Law and Justice (PiS) with its front-runner Beata Szydło turned out strongest in the parliamentary elections on Sunday with almost 38 per cent of votes. The liberal Civic Platform (PO), headed by prime minister Ewa Kopacz, gained only 23.4 per cent. Why this shift to the right? And what will be the consequences for Polish politics? We asked Jacek Kucharczyk, President of the executive board of the Warsaw-based Institute of Public Affairs.

Please find enclosed the latest flashlight europe "Deeper EU integration is in Poland's interest".

Yours sincerely,
Isabell Hoffmann
