

Draft guidelines on Whistleblowing, 3 May

I. INTRODUCTION

1.1. General

The existence of procedures for raising concerns about fraud, corruption or other serious wrongdoing is relevant for all responsible organisations and to the people who work there. While good internal control systems can reduce the probability of something going seriously wrong, this risk can never be reduced to zero. Where this risk materialises, the first people to realise or suspect the problem will often be those who work in or with the organisation. Yet unless the culture is one where employees believe that it is safe and accepted to raise such a concern, the risk is that people will stay silent. This denies the organisation an important opportunity to detect and investigate the concern, to take any appropriate action and to protect its assets, integrity and reputation.

The most effective way to persuade staff to report concerns internally is to provide clearly defined reporting channels as well as safe and accepted routes through which staff may raise concerns outside the organisation as an option of last resort.

Viewed in this way, having whistleblowing procedures in place is simply a question of good management and a means of putting into practice the principle of accountability. They contribute to improving the diligence, integrity and responsibility of an organisation.

It is against this background that rules on whistleblowing were adopted and included in the Staff Regulations (articles 22a and 22b) in 2004.

While these rules have already triggered a number of significant investigations by the European Anti-Fraud Office (OLAF), the Commission is aware that staff may be reticent to make full use of the whistleblowing procedure, because of a fear of negative repercussions on their reputation or career. The Commission therefore considers it necessary to ensure that members of staff who report serious wrongdoing in good faith are afforded the utmost confidentiality and greatest degree of protection against any retaliation or reprisals as a result of their whistleblowing.

risk; malpractice or

Furthermore, as whistleblowing arrangements are widely recognised as an important tool to detect fraud, corruption and serious irregularities, it is important that staff fully understand the types of situations where the obligation to "blow the whistle" applies, and to whom they should address their concerns. Providing guidance on this issue is part of the Commission's overall ethics policy, which aims inter alia at clarifying the rules regarding professional ethics in the Commission¹.

Accordingly, the Commission has issued the following guidelines, in agreement with OLAF.

¹ See Communication from Vice-President Kallas to the Commission on enhancing the environment for professional ethics in the Commission, SEC(2008)301 final, and the Practical Guide to Staff Ethics and Conduct.

While the whistleblowing rules do not strictly speaking apply to seconded national experts, trainees, interim staff and local agents, these categories of staff are also encouraged to make use of the arrangements set out in this document and will be protected against retaliation if they do so in good faith.²

Under the whistleblowing rules, staff are obliged to report serious irregularities. In the present context, serious irregularities are illegal activities, including fraud and corruption, and serious professional wrongdoings. As the whistleblowing arrangements are essentially a detection mechanism to bring cases to the attention of OLAF, the duty to report concerns only serious professional wrongdoings. Staff particularly those that may be detrimental to the financial interests of the European Union.

For the purpose of these guidelines, a whistleblower is a member of staff, acting in good faith, who reports facts discovered in the line of duty which point to the existence of serious irregularities. The reporting should be done in writing and without delay.

The Commission's whistleblowing rules and guidelines apply to all members of staff, irrespective of their administrative position.²

1.3. Scope of the Policy

- Members of staff who report serious irregularities in good faith must not under any circumstances be subject to reprisals or retaliation for whistleblowing. They must be protected and their identity must remain confidential.
- The reported facts must be verified in the appropriate manner and, if they are confirmed, the Commission will take all necessary steps to ensure the appropriate follow-up.
- The rights of defence of any person implicated by the reported incidents must be respected.
- Malicious or frivolous denunciations will not be tolerated.

1.2. Basic Principles

- For this purpose, members of staff must have a choice between a number of reporting channels for whistleblowing. They must be able to bypass the normal chain of hierarchical command if they consider this to be the safest option. Under certain conditions, staff may address their concerns to another EU institution as an option of last resort.

- Members of staff have a duty to report serious irregularities.

Accordingly, not every disclosure of any type of information qualifies as whistleblowing in the sense of these rules. For example, the rules are not intended to apply to the reporting of the following types of information:

- Information already in the public domain (for example: newspaper articles, publicly available audits);
- Unsubstantiated rumours and hearsay;
- Matters of a trivial nature;
- Disagreements over legitimate policy;
- Information not linked to the performance of one's duties; why preclude important information?
- Information discovered a long time before the date of disclosure.

Neither do the rules apply to information for which specific procedures are available to staff:

- Personnel issues where staff have a personal interest in the outcome. In these cases, staff may wish to exercise their statutory rights, for example by lodging a request or complaint with DG HR under Article 90 of the Staff Regulations³;
- Harassment claims and personal disagreements or conflicts with colleagues or hierarchy. In appropriate cases, staff may wish to address themselves to their Human Resources Unit, to the Mediation Service⁴, to HR.B.5 (Equal opportunities and working conditions) or to a confidential counsellor⁵, or to lodge a request for assistance with DG HR under Article 24 of the Staff Regulations⁶.

Nor do the rules apply to disclosures that cannot be considered as reasonable or honest, such as:

- Abusive disclosures (repeated disclosures aimed at paralysing a service);
- Malicious, frivolous or potentially defamatory disclosures (i.e. false or unverifiable accusations with the aim of harming another person's integrity or reputation).

"Good faith" can be taken to mean the unequivocal belief in the veracity of the reported facts, i.e. the fact that the member of staff reasonably and honestly believes the transmitted information to be true. Good faith is presumed unless and until proven otherwise.

If no action is taken within that period of time, or if the whistleblower can demonstrate that the period of time set is unreasonable in light of all the circumstances of the case, he or she may make use of the possibility of external whistleblowing as provided for in Article 22b of the Staff Regulations.

Upon receipt of the information reported internally, OLAf or the Commission must give the whistleblower within 60 days of receipt of the information an indication of the period of time that it considers reasonable and necessary to take appropriate action.

External whistleblowing – option of last resort

In any case, the recipient of the information is in turn obliged to transmit the information thus received without delay to OLAf. Therefore, while the staff member concerned has a choice of reporting channels, the information should ultimately reach OLAf in a short period of time. General or direct means of internal reporting and address his or her report to the Secretary-General or directly to OLAf. OLAf may also be notified through the Fraud Notification System.

If there is a concern that this disclosure may lead to reprisals or that the intended recipient of the report is personally implicated in the serious irregularities, then the staff member may also bypass this direct means of internal reporting and address his or her report to the Secretary-General or directly to OLAf. OLAf may also be notified through the Fraud Notification System.

Internal whistleblowing – second option

Staff members who, in the course of or in connection with their duties, discover that serious irregularities may have occurred or may be occurring, are obliged to report this discovery forthwith and in writing to either their immediate superior or to their Director-General or Head of Service.

Internal whistleblowing – first option

2. REPORTING PROCEDURES

Staff members who make a report in bad faith, particularly if it is based knowingly on false or misleading information, shall not be protected and shall normally be subject to disciplinary measures. The burden of proof in this context is on the Commission.

“Anonymity” refers to the situation whereby the identity of the source of the information is not known to the recipient.

“Confidentiality of identity” means that the identity of the whistleblower is known to the recipient of the information, but is kept confidential vis-à-vis the person(s) potentially implicated in the serious irregularity reported and used on a strict need-to-know basis.

“Retaliation” and “reprisals” are defined as any direct or indirect action or threat of action which is unjustly detrimental to the whistleblower and resulting from the whistleblowing, including, but not limited to, harassment, discrimination, negative appraisals and acts of vindictiveness.

Under this Article, if neither the Commission nor OLAF has taken appropriate action within a reasonable period, the staff member who reported the wrongdoing has the right to bring his or her concerns to the attention of the President of either the Council, the Parliament or the Court of Auditors, or to the Ombudsman. In this case, the whistleblower protection continues to apply.

However, the duties of discretion and of loyalty imply that this is an option of last resort, justifiable only if the official concerned honestly and reasonably believes that the information disclosed, and any allegation contained in it, are substantially true and if s/he has allowed the Commission or OLAF a reasonable period of time to take the appropriate action.

The Commission generally receives and handles large quantities of confidential information, much of it highly sensitive and some of it of great commercial value. The Commission is under the obligation to ensure that this confidentiality is maintained and Commission staff members are therefore necessarily subjected to a duty of discretion.

Under the present rules and arrangements, the possibility of external disclosure is therefore limited to other EU institutions, which are clearly able to hold the Commission to account because of their institutional role, but are also themselves subjected to the duty of discretion. This means of external disclosure therefore strikes an effective balance between the public interests of confidentiality and loyalty and those of transparency and accountability.

It is up to the staff member to choose the most appropriate channel for reporting the serious irregularities that they must disclose. However, if a matter is reported to a Commission service that is not competent to deal with it, it is up to that service to transmit, in the strictest confidence, the relevant information and documents to the competent service and to inform the member of staff accordingly.

3. PROTECTION FOR WHISTLEBLOWERS

Any staff member who reports a serious irregularity, provided that this is done in good faith and in compliance with the provisions of these guidelines, shall be protected against any acts of retaliation.

It should be noted that staff members will not be expected to prove that the wrongdoing is occurring, nor will they lose protection simply because their concern turned out to be unfounded, provided that they could not have been expected to realise that.

The protection continues to apply in cases of external disclosures, provided that the staff member honestly and reasonably believes that the information and any allegation in it are substantially true. In this context, account will be taken of any information the staff member has had from the Commission and from OLAF following the initial internal reporting.

The following specific protective measures apply:

Confidentiality of identity

The protection of a person reporting a serious irregularity in good faith shall be guaranteed first of all by the fact that their identity will be treated in confidence. This means that their name will not be revealed to the person(s) potentially implicated in the alleged wrongdoings or to any other person without a strict need to know, unless the whistleblower personally

⁸ Judgment of 15 May 1997, N/Commission (T-273/94, RecFP-p-11-289) (cf. point 81).

By offering protection to those who have acted responsibly and openly, these arrangements reduce the need and justification for anonymity. Experience shows that anonymous

Naturally, in order for the Commission to be able to apply protective measures, the staff member concerned should identify him - or herself as a whistleblower to the institution, and to observe the procedures as outlined above.

Anonymity

Particular care will be taken during staff appraisal and promotion procedures to ensure that the whistelblower suffers no adverse consequences in this context. Accordingly, the new appraisal system¹⁰ provides for the possibility of the whistleblower to ask that the role of appraiser is taken on by the Director-General or by the Secretary General.

Appraisal and promotion

In urgent and duly justified cases, the protective measure of a transfer in application of Article 7.1 of the Staff Regulations will be taken by the Director-General of DG HR, and by the Secretary General of the Commission for staff working in DG HR.

If the member of staff concerned wishes to be moved to another Commission department in order to safeguard him or her against potential hostile reactions from his or her immediate work environment, then the Commission will take reasonable steps to facilitate such a move. In practice, those members of staff who consider it necessary to move to a different DG or service may address themselves to the Director responsible for resources of his or her own service or to the Central Career Guidance Service (SCOP) in DG HR, who will provide them with counselling in order to identify the type of post which fits their profile and professional aspirations.

Mopiqow

In this respect the Court has ruled that disciplinary procedures that are opened on the basis of information of which the source is not revealed are irregular, as long as it does not affect the possibility of the person who is subject to a subsequent disciplinary procedure to comment on the facts or documents transmitted, or on the conclusions that the Commission draws from them.⁸ The disciplinary rules of the Commission allow it to keep the identity of the whistleblower confidential, while ensuring that the rights of defence of the person concerned are fully respected.

authorities the disclosure of his/her identity or that is a requirement in any subsequent criminal law proceedings. In all other cases, the Commission is committed to keeping the identity of the whistleblower confidential. To this end, the Commission has asked OLAF not to include the identity of the whistleblower in the information about investigations that OLAF transmits to the Commission.

is mere evidence to his - would not be able to prevent the agency from investigating information is more often frivolous, malicious and unreliable than information coming from known sources, and anonymity deprives the investigative services from the possibility of asking the source for clarification or more information.

For these reasons, anonymous reporting is not encouraged.¹¹

Penalties for those taking retaliatory action

No members of staff or managers of the Commission may use their position to prevent other members of staff from complying with their obligation to report serious irregularities.

Any form of retaliation undertaken by a staff member against any person for reporting a serious irregularity in good faith is prohibited. In such cases, disciplinary measures will normally be taken.

Where members of staff consider that they have been the victim of retaliation as a result of the disclosure of a serious irregularity, they shall be entitled to ask for assistance from the Commission under Article 24 of the Staff Regulations and to request that protective measures be adopted. Such requests should be addressed to DG HR.

Limits

As explained above, the whistleblowing provisions are concerned with disclosure of information pointing to fraud, corruption and other comparable serious wrongdoings. They are not intended to be used as substitutes for grievance procedures where staff have some personal interest in - or seek to dictate - the outcome. They are also inappropriate for dealing with disagreements over legitimate policies. Their purpose is to allow the staff member to raise a concern about wrongdoings so that those in charge may look into it.

It should be noted that, even if there is substance to the information itself, the protection may be lost if the staff member makes unwarranted or damaging allegations that s/he cannot show to be honest or reasonable. The effect of this is that wherever a staff member is contemplating a disclosure in the sense of these guidelines, it is advisable to let the facts speak for themselves.

Similarly, if the staff member makes the disclosure for purposes of private gain – for instance by selling the information to external parties – he or she will forfeit this protection as that would not be a legitimate disclosure in the sense of the whistleblowing rules.

Finally, if the staff member is him- or herself implicated in the serious irregularities and decides to come forward and report these irregularities, this fact may constitute an attenuating circumstance in any ensuing disciplinary proceedings, but it is not a qualifying disclosure in the sense of this policy and does not provide him or her with full protection against disciplinary consequences on the basis of the whistleblowing rules.

this is not defined

¹¹ As potential whistleblowers may hesitate to come forward with their identity for fear of retaliatory action, the OLAF Fraud Notification System offers the facility to enter into an initial dialogue with specialised staff before a person decides to come forward and make use of the whistleblowing procedures.

Naturally, this guidance function is without prejudice to the possibility of staff members to consult their line manager, or a specialised service.¹³

These designated officials will provide confidential and impartial guidance on, for example, whether the information in question is covered by the whistleblowering rules, which reporting channel may best be used for the information concerned, and which alternative procedures are available if the information concerned does not qualify for whistleblowing (signposting). They will also be able to tender advice and guidance to staff members on protective measures that the staff member may wish to seek following the reporting.

In agreement with OLA^F, it has therefore been decided to transfer this function to the Network of Ethics Correspondents of the Commission. Each DG and service of the Commission has one or several designated Ethics Correspondents¹², who are trained to provide guidance to staff on ethical issues, including whistleblowing.

The guidance and support function was until recently offered by the judicial and legal advice unit in OLAH. However, experience suggests that this is best carried out by a point of contact not connected with the investigation function of OLAF, taking account of the fact that, in particular, support to whistleblowers is essentially the responsibility of the Commission as Guidance to potential whistleblowers in an early stage also helps to avoid ill-advised reporting, which may cause frustration to the staff member concerned and may be detrimental to the reputation of the organization. This guidance therefore lessens the risks of disclosure-related conflicts.

While reporting serious irregularities is an obligation under the Staff Regulations, the Commission is aware that staff may be reticent to come forward and report their concerns. In order to help staff who are unsure of whether or not certain facts should be reported, the Commission offers confidential and impartial guidance and support to (potential) whistleblowers.

5. GUIDANCE AND SUPPORT
→ Why? Coaches may play in complexity, making this time hurt too short or potentially too long.

It should be noted that the whistleblower is entitled to be informed within 60 days of the time needed to take appropriate action, but that it is up to OLAF and/or the Commission to determine the appropriate course of action.

According to Article 22b of the Staff Regulations, OLAf or the Commission must give the whistleblower an indication of the time needed to take appropriate action. If no action is taken within that period of time, or if the whistleblower can demonstrate that the period of time set within that period of time, or if the circumstances of the case, he or she may address his or her concerns to one of the other institutions referred to above. L-4 shown?

4. FEEDBACK TO THE WHISTLER LOWER

In addition, the web-based Fraud Notification System of OLAF gives potential whistleblowers who hesitate to come forward the opportunity to enter into a dialogue with OLAF investigators, which allow these staff members to verify whether the information in their possession fall within the remit of OLAF.

In case of doubt, staff are encouraged to seek the guidance offered to them when contemplating a disclosure under the whistleblowing rules.

6. ROLE OF MANAGEMENT

The duty on managers to notify OLAF of information received on the basis of the whistleblowing rules does not of itself discharge them from their own responsibilities to tackle the wrongdoing.

Managers will therefore have to reflect on whether the evidence provided reveals shortcomings that could be redressed or requires other measures in addition to the transmission of the information to OLAF. In particular, if following such information it occurs that a procedural or organisational change could prevent the risk of serious professional wrongdoing~~s~~ in the future, such measures should be considered and, where appropriate, taken as soon as possible. Care should be taken that any such measure does not harm any future OLAF investigation into the reported facts. In case of doubt, managers are therefore advised to consult OLAF before taking any such measures.

7. COMMUNICATION AND AWARENESS-RAISING

In order to increase the awareness of the whistleblowing arrangements amongst staff, these guidelines will be given adequate publicity through the internal communication channels in the Commission and will be included in the course material of the Commission's courses and trainings on ethics and integrity.

8. REVISION

The practical application and effectiveness of these whistleblowing guidelines will be evaluated at the end of a period of three years following their adoption. In light of the results of this evaluation, these guidelines may be revised as appropriate.

3. Paragraphs 1 and 2 shall not apply to documents, deeds, reports, notes or information in any form whatsoever held for the purposes of, or created or disclosed to the official in the course of, proceedings in legal cases, whether pending or closed.

2. The period referred to in paragraph 1 shall not apply where the official can demonstrate that it is unreasonable having regard to all the circumstances of the case.

(b) the official has previously disclosed the same information to OLAf or to his own institution and has allowed the OLAf or that institution the period of time set by the Office of the institution to which he belongs provided that both of the following conditions are met:

(a) the official honestly and reasonably believes that the information disclosed, and any allegation contained in it, are substantially true; and the Commission or of the Court of Auditors or of the Council or of the European Parliament, or to the European Ombudsman, shall not suffer any prejudicial effects on the part of the institution to which he belongs provided that both of the following conditions are met:

1. An official who further discloses information as defined in Article 22a to the President of

Article 22b

4. Paragraphs 1 to 3 shall not apply to documents, deeds, reports, notes or information in any form whatsoever held for the purposes of, or created or disclosed to the official in the course of, proceedings in legal cases, whether pending or closed.

3. An official shall not suffer any prejudicial effects on the part of the institution as a result of having communicated the information referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2, provided that he acted reasonably and honestly.

2. Any official receiving the information referred to in paragraph 1 shall without delay transmit to OLAf any evidence of which he is aware from which the existence of the irregularities referred to in paragraph 1 may be presumed.

This paragraph shall also apply in the event of serious failure to comply with a similar obligation on the part of a Member of an institution or any other person in the service of or carrying out work for an institution.

Information mentioned in the first subparagraph shall be given in writing.

1. Any official who, in the course of or in connection with the performance of his duties, becomes aware of facts which gives rise to a presumption of the existence of possible illegal activity, including fraud or corruption, detrimental to the interests of the Communities, or of either his immediate superior or his Director-General or, if he considers it useful, the Secretary-General, or the persons in equivalent positions, or the European Anti-Fraud Office to completely withhold the obligations of professionals duties which may constitute a serious failure conduct relating to the discharge of professional duties which may constitute a serious failure to carry out work for an institution.

Article 22a
