~~See Guide for applicants~~

This project targets the problem of hate crime against LGBT persons with a focus on the problems of lack of official data and under-reporting of hate crime incidents to the police.

This project will for the first time strategically engage relevant authorities across the union in effective action to change anti-LGBT sentiment in society. To achieve this goal the project will 1) develop, improve and implement tools to effectively combat hate crimes against LGBT persons, 2) prevent homophobia within structures and routines of authorities that directly influence the work of these authorities as well as 'internalized homophobia' effecting indirectly victims' readiness to report hate crimes, 3) facilitate cooperation between practitioners in different Member States, including Public Authorities and Civil Society Organisations, and 4) ensure the generation of future statistical knowledge about hate crimes on basis of reported incidents. The full potential in this project lies in the development of tools for a web-based reporting system and training modules that can be used and implemented across the Member States.

A mapping of the situation regarding hate crime through an in-depth analysis of existing knowledge and resources on hate crime will be carried. This involves data collection and participatory action in nine capitals in the EU. Other activities include the development of information- and training material and a web-based reporting system for the use of police authorities, training modules for police, and active involvement of beneficiaries in the implementation of the project. The reporting system will be implemented and a mid-term assessment will take place including follow-up on the implementation process and collection of lessons learned. After the mid-term assessment a second test and monitoring period will run for four months followed by a concluding evaluation of the project and the development of a final report on hate crime against LGBT persons with a focus on reported incidents, and the possibilities for continuing and expanding the project to make it nation-wide and include more/all EU Member States. The report will include a Hate Crime Tool Kit with training and reporting modules.

Beneficiaries are police authorities, LGBT-NGO's, ministries of justice and LGBT persons in the nine participating capitals - Paris, Berlin, Stockholm, London, Lisbon, Dublin, Bucharest, Riga, and Copenhagen.

Deliverables will be as follows: a report mapping hate crimes and related best practices in participating Member States; a conference for exchange of knowledge and development of tools with the participation of representatives from LGBT NGOs, police authorities, and Ministries of Justice; electronic/print leaflets containing information about: 1) fundamental rights principles, 2) LGBT hate crime, 3) reporting possibilities, 4) the project and online police reporting system - targeting all LGBT persons in the nine cities; electronic/print leaflets containing information about: 1) fundamental rights principles, 2) LGBT hate crime, 3) handling of hate crime/LGBT victims, 4) the project and online reporting system - targeting police personnel in the nine cities. Furthermore the deliverables will be training modules for police officers and an online web-site and reporting system to be used by the participating police departments. The web-site includes the possibility for publication of stories by the partner NGOs - accessible to all. A final report will be worked out about hate crimes against LGBT persons and the project, including a Hate Crime Tool Kit.

Please note that if you have to print the form (see relevant guide for applicants) it is only printed what is visible on the screen. Therefore - while a maximum of characters is allowed to type in - be careful with carriage returns and white spaces, in order to fit the summary also visibly on the page
